“While a bold and sweet fruited wine inherently, as per the variety, there’s a lift and freshness in tow that enables an easy approach.

Milk chocolate meets sweet plummy fruit with dark chocolate liquorice bullets, rose water, ginger and pencil shavings in the mix. Full and full on with a heading that says everything is even and well judged. Charm is the byword.”

“There’s a lot of wine here. It tastes of black cherry and raisin, vanilla and fresh cedarwood, mint and a Campari-and-orange character. It’s warm but not excessively so; it’s generous but controlled. The oak itself feels slightly raw but the fruit is fresher than it’s been with this wine in the past, and it’s better for it. This is definitely worth trying.”
